Grigore Gafencu told Baron Bessenyei, member of the Hungarian National Committee, that the Romanian National Committee had ceased to exist and that there were now two groups of Romanian political exiles. He said that Carol Davila would now join the Radescu-Gafencu group. Gafencu indicated the failure to include Davila in the Committee as the principal reason of the crisis. Gafencu said that it had been the greatest mistake to exclude somebody who was so much appreciated by Americans in top positions, and who was the only Romanian who knew Mr. Acheson well.
